Mum of twins slammed after tattooing one so she can tell them apart

A woman who was struggling to tell her twins apart had one tattooed, leaving her mother-in-law furious. The 31-year-old mum had her two little boys Adam and Jack after five years of trying for children. But because Jack was born with a condition that requires him to be injected once a week, she decided to get him tattooed so she could administer the medication to the right baby, reports Daily Star. Explaining what forced her to make this decision, she said that when she went back to work, her mother-in-law offered to babysit, but during that time she accidentally injected Adam instead of Jack. "She gave the shot to the wrong kid," she said. "Now they may be fraternal but they look identical. I'll be honest my husband and I even mix them up sometimes. Everyone does. "She immediately noticed her mistake called 911 and they were transferred to hospital. "By the time I got there Adam had been given the reversal agent and they were both happily sipping on juice loving the attention." Mother-in-law was beside herself. "I tried to ease her worry but she refused to babysit so to daycare they went." To stop it from happening again, she said her doctor recommended a medical tattoo - a freckle, no bigger than the end of a pencil eraser, on an area of skin that's easily seen, while the child is under mild sedation similar to dental offices. And in two to three years - when the babies have developed more personal features - it will begin to fade. But as soon as her mother-in-law discovered what she had done, she 'lost her st'. The parent went on: "I tried to explain but she just freaked out so I put both kids on the floor and told her to pick up Jack and find the tattoo. "She picked up Adam So I handed her Jack and after 20 minutes still couldn't find it. Stripped him to his skivvies." The mum shared the post to Reddit in the hopes that readers would assure her she did the right thing - and they were very understanding.

Doctors urge Nigerians to accept COVID-19 vaccine

From Ado Abubakar Musa, Jos

The Medical and Dental Consultants Association of Nigeria (MDCAN), yesterday, called on Nigerians to accept the COVID-19 vaccine when available in the country, saying, "The benefits of the vaccine far outweigh any perceived risks."

The group said the information available to it showed that the vaccine was safe and that therefore people should not be scared to accept it, explaining that all hands must be on deck to fight against the disease.

In a press briefing in Jos, Professor Ken Ozoilo, the President of MDCAN, said they had observed "with dismay the failure of many Nigerians to adhere to the non-pharmaceutical methods of COVID-19 prevention as espoused by relevant bodies, including the NCDC and the presidential task force.

"This is despite the raging second wave of the disease and the emergence of newer and deadlier strains of the organism with greater infectivity and mortality. We caution all Nigerians to endeavour to comply with all the non-pharmaceutical measures put in place for the prevention of the transmission of the COVID-19 virus, especially as advocated by the Federal Ministry of Health, the Nigeria Centre for Disease Control (NCDC) and The Presidential Task Force (PTF) on COVID-19."

Prof Ozoilo, however, called on the government to be mindful not to unduly divert attention and resources from other disease conditions, both infectious and non-infectious, afflicting Nigerians.

NCC, AEPB to enforce hawking of pirated works in FCT

From Adelanwa Bamgboye

The Nigerian Copyright Commission (NCC) and the Abuja Environmental Protection Board (AEPB) have struck a pact to boost copyright protection through joint enforcement in the Federal Capital Territory (FCT) against street hawking of copyright protected works like books, CDs, VCDs and DVDs.

The Director General of NCC, Mr John O. Asein, and the Director of AEPB, Dr Hassan Abubakar, who disclosed this at a meeting in Abuja, reiterated that street sales of copyright materials were illegal and would be checked in line with the relevant copyright and environmental laws.

Speaking during a courtesy visit at the AEPB headquarters in Abuja, the NCC DG expressed displeasure at the indulgence of persons posing as newspaper vendors but who in actual fact engaged in street sales of pirated books.

He also called for proactive partnership of NCC and AEBP to rid the streets of widespread peddling of other copyright works such as CDs, CDs and DVDs.

He said, "This unwholesome practice of selling copyright works on the streets is an open show of lawlessness which portrays a negative image of the country. Most of the people engaged in this illegal activity use the sales of newspapers and magazines as a decoy to perpetrate acts of copyright piracy."

Responding, the AEPB director pointed out that the call for partnership was a renewal of an existing inter-governmental synergy between both government agencies considering that the AEPB had been clamping down on the activities of book hawkers and sellers of CDs, VCDs and DVDs on the streets of Abuja.

He noted that raids by AEPB operatives had resulted in large seizures while the offenders were being prosecuted for environmental nuisance.

Banditry: Nasarawa willing to work with, support hunters

From Ibraheem Hamza Muhammad, Lafia

Nasarawa State Governor, Abdullahi Sule, has expressed willingness to work with and support hunters in the state towards addressing banditry and kidnapping.

Gov Sule made this known while hosting members of the Hunters Group of Nigeria in the state at the government house.

According to the governor, though hunters in the state have been jointly working with security agencies to tackle banditry and kidnapping, his dream is to see how government can work closely with the hunters so that they can be compensated for putting their lives on the line.

The governor, however, called on the group to co-opt other hunters that were not part of the association for easy coordination.

He said, "It's normal to have splinter groups in such associations, but I will call on you, to see how to co-opt all those people we are working with. We really have a lot of respect for them."

The governor recalled that few months back he visited some of hunters that got wounded and were receiving treatment at a hospital.

He said, unlike states in the South West where they have the Amotekun security outfit, Nasarawa had since adopted community policing, with most of the members trained in Makurdi in Benue State, noting that some hunters were part of the community policing team.

He told the hunters that, "I'm looking forward to how we can work with you in Nasarawa State."

Earlier, the Commandant General of the Hunters Group of Nigeria, Ambassador Joshua Shateme, said they were at the government house to familiarise themselves with the governor over his feat in tackling security issues, as well as look for avenues to work with him.

Police probe abuse, torture of girls in Bauchi

From Hassan Ibrahim, Bauchi

The Bauchi State Police Command has launched an investigation into a video clip in which some boys are seen beating up some girls in the state.

Our correspondent who watched the video saw how the girls, numbering about 10, were confined in an uncompleted building being brutalised and harassed.

The command's spokesman, DSP Ahmed Mohammed Wakil, in a statement, said, "The attention of the Bauchi State Police Command has been drawn to a viral multimedia clip (audio and video) of a torture scene in which a gang of hardened young boys are seen cruelly inflicting severe pain and violent treatment on a group of young ladies in their late teens and early 20s.

"The video shows the syndicate confining the group of the captured ladies numbering about 10 to an unkempt and uncompleted building as they brutally and oppressively beat the girls with intensive strokes of the whip. They further demeaned the ladies by using razor blades to cut off their hair while using vulgar words to further harass them."

DSP Wakil said the police command sympathised with the victims of the unfortunate incident, noting that the victims had been invited to give vital information that would lead to the arrest and prosecution of the perpetrators.

He further said, "Such open violation of human dignity is not only alarming, but an act that amounts to gender-based violence," adding that, "Our men have swung into action, investigations have earnestly commenced and the syndicate involved will be apprehended and arraigned before a court of competent jurisdiction."

He noted that the three suspects arrested at the crime scene were being profiled as no drugs were found on them, saying they would be put on the watch list to determine the next action against them.

He explained that, "On February 3, 2021, we raided Karu Abbattoir; 1st Avenue, Gwarimpa; Dawaki behind News Engineering; Baban Bola Pantaker Area and Police Sign Post, Dutse Makaranta and Fo1 Kubwa Extension.

He noted that those whose cases had been sustained had been charged accordingly, saying that others found with smaller quantities and found to be users or first offenders were referred for counselling.

NSCDC arrests man for impersonating his wife

From Hameed Oyegbade, Osogbo

A man was arrested on Wednesday while impersonating his wife during an aptitude test for applicants seeking teaching job in public schools in Osun State.

The man, Aremu Adekunle, was caught at the test centre at the Ilesha College of Education and handed over to men of the Nigeria Security and Civil Defence Corps (NSCDC).

The Commissioner for Education, Mr Folorunsho Oladoin, condemned the act, stressing that it was shameful and embarrassing that a prospective teacher could be found committing such crime.

Mr Oladoin said, "It is shameful that somebody who wants to teach students academically and morally could be involved in fraudulent malpractice; what example is such a person going to set for the students? This is rather unfortunate."

At the mercy of terrorists, bandits and violent herders (II)

Damaturu was peaceful. It had not, as at that period, completely lost its innocence. The Boko Haram was then like a storm gathering momentum at the inner depths of the ocean. Only very few people knew that terror was lurking in the corner.

That trip ended on the same note with which it began - of happiness and sense of fulfilment. But it also marked the beginning of another. Not long thereafter, we had to make another journey to Sokoto.

Traveling round the country at that time would leave you with no sense of foreboding, no apprehension. Wherever you might be in the country, you were sure that most parts of the country were safe and secure.

The roads were free of agents of Beelzebub. In fact, people preferred travelling round the country during that time at night. You were sure of travelling from the extreme regions of the north to the other extreme without the fear of having your life cut short by those who have lost theirs to the denizens of hell.

The sight of the big, hot kettle and the dark colour of the spiced tea on sale usually leave you with that unforgettable memory of how 'sweet' life could be. You would also want to savour the pleasurable noise of young and nubile female hawkers jostling on the road side trying to sell Fura de Nunu. You would always want to travel in line with.

Suddenly, all of the above have virtually, if not completely become a thing of the past. I shudder to think that they have become past perfect. This is because our nation is now held in the jugular by at least three noxious luciferous agents all of which now threaten its corporate existence. In the beginning it was the Boko Haram (BH) terrorists whose activities and notoriety have occasioned panoply of studies and works all around the world. The BH emerged from parts of the Northeast and have ensured that the north has lost its peace and sleep. Since whatever happens in the north does not stay in the north, the terror in the methodology of violent extremism has since become a national tragedy. Damaturu lost its innocence in order that Adamawa and Niger might lose their sanity and conscience. Thus, teenage girls have become women at seven; boys who have barely left their mothers' bosoms have since become gun-bearers and agents of death. Men, aged fifty and above now rape toddlers who do not know where they are nor to what use their genitals could be put. Life has simply lost its sanctity. The north appears to have lost innocence. Then from nowhere emerged what they now refer to as bandits. The latter reminds you of that era in classical Arab history known as the Jahiliyyah - an era when brigands would establish authorities over large swathes of land and pursue the villainous pleasure not of the celestial but the terrestrial. Bandits they are because they rob. Bandits they are because they kill. Unlike the BH that initially pleaded the establishment of an uncanny suzerainty of Islam the like of which is even unknown to Prophet Muhammad (s.a.w), the bandits in the northwest of this country do not lay any claim to preternatural knowledge of Islam. Rather, their sole agenda is to be in charge of the natural resources of the land. They desire to be in control of bread, water and fire.

While the nation was busy grappling with how to rein these elements in and impose some order on the disorder in the polity, the third angle in the triangle of infamy have emerged. Here reference is to the violent herder. The herder who uses his cattle as a warrant to perpetrate odious criminality. The herder of today who now bears Kalashnov and AK 47. The herder of today who now sees his host as boon and the latter's land as that which can be desecrated and destroyed at will and without compunctions. His criminal activities have functioned in calling to question our unity as a nation. That the ordinary herder has achieved notoriety for criminality has also, unfortunately, widened the geography of ignorance and prejudice among a section of the Nigerian elites who now consider all Fulanis as land-grabbers and kidnapers.

French activists denounce state charter 'imposed on Muslims'

Over 500 French Muslim community leaders and activists have signed a letter denouncing a government charter that state-approved French Muslim leaders have signed.

The signatories include 100 imams, 50 teachers in Islamic sciences, 50 presidents of associations and 300 students in Islamic sciences.

The letter takes aim at a charter signed by the state-approved French Council for Muslim Worship which denounces accusations of racism against France, pledges to recognise "equality between men and women," and to combat "political Islam."

The letter states: "These steps were carried out without any consultation with imams or the Muslim community, on whom certain people want to once again impose a way of organising themselves, even though many initiatives on the ground already exist with promising results. A simple consultation of the interested parties would have made it possible to identify the real needs and expectations of Muslims, far removed from the instrumentalisation and political escalation that we are witnessing."

A few weeks ago the French Council for Muslim Worship, which is approved by the state to represent Islam in France, formally approved a "charter of principles" for Islam in France.

The text, demanded by President Emmanuel Macron in November as part of his offensive against "separatism," also affirms the compatibility of Islam with secularism.

Harvard Law Review elects its first Muslim president

The Harvard Law Review in the United States has elected Hassaan Shahawy, a Los Angeles born and bred Egyptian American, as the first Muslim president in its 134-year history.

Jennifer Heath, the programme administrator and information systems manager at the publication, confirmed that Shahawy is the first Muslim president.

Founded in 1887 by former U.S. Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis, the Harvard Law Review is a student-edited law journal with the largest circulation of any law journal worldwide, according to Harvard University.

A second-year law student at Harvard Law School, Shahawy first served as a general editor for the law review for six months before he decided to run for president this past January.

"It's very humbling of course, to have a Muslim elected in a positive way," Shahawy said.

He currently works at the MacArthur Justice Center providing legal representation to incarcerated individuals in criminal appeal cases. Shahawy's passion for criminal justice reform stems from his experience as an undergraduate at Harvard, where he visited and worked with incarcerated individuals in local jails in Boston who were working to earn college credit.

After graduating Harvard in 2016, Shahawy was selected as a Rhodes Scholar and majored in Oriental Studies and specialized in Islamic Law at Oxford University.

Cleric urges parents to guide wards in marriage

By Abbas Jimoh

The Chief Imam of al-Huda Masjid Byazhin-Kubwa, Abuja, Dr. Rafee' Owonla Busayree Al-Ijebuwi, has urged Muslim parents to guide their children in choosing partners for marriage.

This is contained in his 258th Jumua khutbah (sermon) titled "Your Family, O Muslim!".

"Fear Allah with regards to your children. Show a keen interest in letting each of your family be a stable castle making up a good society based on the rightness of individuals; truly actual, instead of merely desiring.

"A proper family is the building foundation of any good human society. A foundation's strength depends on how its materials interlock. Individual members of a family are its building materials," Al-Ijebuwi said.

The cleric stressed the importance of choosing a pious spouse, saying: "The aim is to encourage ourselves on fixing the Muslim family. The care starts from the contraction of legal marriage between man and woman, not adultery or

Why church should be involved in politics – Ekweremadu

By Abdulateef Salau

Former Deputy Senate President, Senator Ike Ekweremadu, has described the indifference of churches and devout Christians toward politics as self-exclusion from nation-building.

He said the active involvement of church in politics would foster development, national identity and create stability in society.

Ekweremadu stated this in a paper titled ‘The Role of the Church and Politician in Politics and Democratic Nation-Building’, which he delivered at the Standing Committee forum of the Church of Nigeria (Anglican Church), which held at the All Saints Cathedral, Onitsha, Anambra State on Thursday.

The senator, who was represented by a Senior Advocate of Nigeria, Professor Offornze Amucheazi, equally enjoined Christians in politics to be exemplary and lead by biblical principles.

“Oftentimes, you hear Christians say that the church should not be involved in politics. That, by extension, is self-exclusion in the task of nation-building,” Ekweremadu was quoted as saying in a statement by his media aide Uche Anichukwu.

He said: “It is important that the church does not remain aloof, but should play a decisive role in the task of nation-building. In doing so, she helps to foster development, national identity, and create stability in society.

“It is this lack of national identity and instability that has brought our country to where it is today. It is the lack of national identity that has fostered the divisiveness in our country and created the insecurity which we now experience.”

Ekweremadu said the church could participate in politics and nation-building without being partisan by engaging in political education, mass mobilisation for political participation, encouraging obedience to constituted authorities and rule of law, counselling and nurturing of political leaders, capacity building and peer review opportunities for leaders, and acting as watchdog of the polity by calling out leaders, when they fail, but encouraging them where they have done well.

Membership: No APC member will be left out – Gov Buni

By Ibrahim Baba Saleh (Damaturu), Hamisu Kabir Matazu & Saawua Terzungwe (Abuja)

Yobe State Governor and Chairman of the All Progressives Congress (APC) national caretaker and extraordinary convention planning committee, Mai Mala Buni has said no member of the party would be left out in the ongoing membership registration and revalidation exercise of the party.

The Buni-committee had declared the nationwide exercise to update and validate membership registers across its chapters.

Dust has been trailing the exercise across the country with the pioneer National Chairman of the party, Chief Bisi Akande, describing the exercise as an aberration. The leader of the party, Aiswaju Bola Tinubu and Comrade Adams Oshiomhole have supported Akande’s position on the exercise.

Speaking after revalidating his membership in Bunigari, Gujba LGA, Yobe State, Buni maintained that the exercise was within the confines of the law under Article (9) 4 of the party.

“Article (9) 4 of our party is very clear about what we are doing; we cannot do anything outside the constitution. I am assuring all our party members that no one would be left unregistered.

“The exercise is going according to plan, as expected and would avail the party the chance to wax stronger by having more membership in the country,” he said.

Meanwhile, the Presidential Support Committee (PSC), has urged officials of the APC carrying out the revalidation exercise to execute the exercise dutifully, transparently and with the fear of God.

Doing that, according to a statement by the National Facilitator of the PSC, Gideon Sammani, will enable the party to produce an authentic membership register.

The committee also advised the leadership of the party to refrain from anything that would scuttle or tarnish the exercise.

“The exercise should be seen to be free, fair and transparent and no one should attempt to hijack it at any level,” Sammani urged.

Stakeholders meet over Delta crisis

Also, yesterday, stakeholders of the APC met at the party’s national secretariat in Abuja, and deliberated on how to resolve the crisis rocking the Delta State chapter of the party over the registration exercise.

The party had suspended the exercise in the state following the intense crisis rocking the chapter.

Addressing newsmen, Niger State governor and chairman of the APC national membership registration and revalidation exercise, Sani Bello, said the meeting agreed on a workable method to move the party forward.

“It is not unusual in a political process that you have differences, opinions and what have you. So, Delta State is a very important state for us in the South-South. And we have been able to agree on a workable method to move the party forward.

“So I hope that going forward, we won’t have to come here from Delta State. They should be able to resolve their issues back home,” he said.

Seek APC presidential ticket, women leaders tell Okorocho

By Saawua Terzungwe

Women leaders across the six geo-political zones in the country have asked a former governor of Imo State, Sen. Rochas Okorocho, to seek the presidential ticket of the ruling All Progressives Congress (APC) in 2023.

The women, under the aegis of Woddi Women Voices led by Okorocho’s wife, Dr. Nneoma Okorocho, made the demand when they paid him a visit yesterday, at his private office in Abuja.

APC reconciliation: Jaji refutes N100m Yari/Marafa deal

By Saawua Terzungwe

A former governorship aspirant on the platform of the All Progressives Congress (APC) in Zamfara State, Rep Aminu Sani Jaji, has refuted claims that a former governor of the state, Abdulaziz Yari, gave the Senator Kabiru Marafa-led defunct faction of the party N100 million to collapse its structure into the mainstream APC in the state.

Jaji, a former chairman, House Committee on Internal Security who was a key player in the Marafa faction, told newsmen yesterday in Abuja that the claim was a campaign of calumny aimed at demarketing APC in the state ahead of the 2023 elections.

The Governor Mai Mala Buni-led Caretaker/Extraordinary Convention Planning Convention had last week, invited and reconciled Yari and Marafa at the APC National Secretariat, putting an end to the long-standing feud over the control of party structure in the state.

Jaji, while refuting the N100 million claim, said the Kabiru faction sheathed its sword to allow peace to reign in the state chapter of the party and enable the APC to reclaim power in the next election.

He explained that during the meeting with the national leadership of the party, it was agreed that Yari remained the APC leader in the state, while Marafa was requested to withdraw his pending litigation in court and collapse his structure into the mainstream.

Group condemns smear campaign against N/Assembly clerk

By Itodo Daniel Sule

A group, Professional Mediators and Conciliators, has raised an alarm over alleged desperate moves to tarnish the image of the Clerk of the National Assembly, Arch. Ojo Amos Olatunde, through unfounded allegations of shady dealings.

An NGO known as Equity and Transparency Development Initiative had in a petition urged the Independent Corrupt Practices and other Related Offences Commission (ICPC) to investigate Olatunde over interference in ICT contract award.

A statement issued, yesterday, by Comrade Igbotako Nowinta, Executive Director of the group, maintained that the clerk is a man of impeccable character with unblemished record of service, and wondered why the group is accusing him of abetting espionage as well as influencing award of ICT contract in the National Assembly to a company in which he has interest.

Protest hits Lagos-Abeokuta expressway as vehicle kills female student

From Peter Moses, Abeokuta

Commuters and travellers plying the Lagos-Abeokuta Expressway were on Thursday stranded around Itori and Wasimi villages as protesting secondary school students blocked the road.

The students of United Comprehensive High School, Wasimi in Ewekoro Local Government Area were protesting against the alleged killing of a female student.

The victim was said to have been knocked down and died in front of the school by a truck.

They prevented vehicles from both sides of the road from moving, as they created barricades along the expressway to express their anger.

Motorists had to divert to bush paths and abandoned roads which crisscrossed the villages around Wasimi village.

The development affected the free flow of vehicles both inward Lagos and outward Abeokuta as vehicles were stranded for hours.

Some people were also reportedly injured during the protest.

The Sector Commander, Federal Road Safety Corps (FRSC) in Ogun, Ahmed Umar, confirmed the incident.

He said: "A Toyota Space Bus without number plates suspected to be 'Tokunbo' hit a Senior Secondary School girl who died immediately.

"As a result of this incident, some boys set the vehicle ablaze, while two policemen who came to quell the crisis were wounded.

"Patrol operatives had earlier evacuated the body of the dead student to the morgue of the General Hospital, Ifo before the crisis erupted.

"The Area Commander, the DPO in the area with the Acting Unit Commander have put the issue under control assuring that the police will investigate the matter.

"Normalcy has returned to the area as the irate youths have left the road and traffic is now flowing without interruption."

Insecurity: Leaders of conscience want speedy implementation of ranching

From Abdullateef Aliyu, Lagos

The leadership of the National Consultative Front, NCFront, yesterday hailed the Northern governors and the Nigerian Senate over their position on Cattle Ranching as against grazing to douse the heightening ethnic strife and violence in Nigeria.

It will be recalled that the Leaders of Conscience of NCFront in their national address on February 2, 2021, called on governments in Nigeria to immediately adopt cattle ranching instead of cattle grazing.

NCFront's Head of Public Affairs Bureau, Dr. Tanko Yunusa, said the position of the Northern Governors' Forum if well implemented in good time, "will reduce farmers-herders clashes and also expose criminal and unauthorized elements, whether alien or local using our bushes and forest to wreak havoc on innocent and unsuspecting Citizens of Nigeria."

The group also announced 1st of May, 2020 as the commencement date of the independent People's Constitutional Conference for Nigeria initiated by Leaders of Conscience to prevent civil war and anarchy in Nigeria.

The conference coordinating team is to be anchored by Dr Olisa Agbakoba, SAN, Dr Hakeem Baba Ahmed, Dr Mrs Tokunbo Awolowo Dosunmu, and Dr Obadiah Mailafia, among others.

From Joseph Amedu, Lokoja

Senator Orji Uzor Kalu has told the governors of the 36 states of the federation that they have the greatest role to play to tackle the rising insecurity in Nigeria ahead of the federal government.

were worrisome, stressed that the governors remained the best leaders that could effectively use their positions to remedy the situation.

Responding, Governor Bello expressed delight with the encouragement and motivation extended to him by Senator Kalu to lead the state on the right path since he came on board.

On the ongoing APC membership registration and validation exercise, he disclosed that the party was making progress as no fewer than 25 million people had joined the largest party in Africa.

Edo resident doctors tackle Obaseki over graft claim

From Usman A. Bello, Benin

The Association of Resident Doctors (ARD) branch in Edo State Hospital Management Board has denied the allegation of corruption against doctors in the employment of the state government made against them by Governor Godwin Obaseki.

Governor Obaseki had on Monday condemned what he described as high-level corruption in the healthcare system in the state, saying his administration would insist on a new order and that doctors must render services to Edo people to justify their salaries.

Obaseki made the allegation during a meeting with doctors drawn from the State Hospitals Management Board, Edo Specialist Hospital, Edo Primary Healthcare Agency and the Ministry of Health at the government house.

Responding, the ARD in a statement signed by Dr Osayande Edorisiagbon and Dr Ovbiagele Uaboi, president and secretary-general respectively, after an emergency meeting, described Obaseki's comments as unsubstantiated.

The body said they were unaware of any independent panel set up by the government where any doctor was indicted for any form of financial impropriety and challenged the government to make its findings public.

From Ibraheem Hamza Muhammad

Professor Shehu Abdur-Rahman has taken over the reigns in Federal University of Lafia (FULafia) from Professor Muhammad Sanusi Liman as the third vice-chancellor of the institution.

Speaking after he took over, Prof. Shehu said he was prepared for his new assignment by the process that saw him emerge as the vice-chancellor, describing the process "as very tedious and reflected integrity, innovation and excellence."

Ahly shock Palmeiras to take third at Club World Cup

African champions Al Ahly shocked Brazilian giants Palmeiras to win the third-place play-off of the Club World Cup in a penalty shoot-out on Thursday.

After a goalless 90 minutes, the game went straight to penalties and Al Ahly captain Mohamed El-Shenawy saved the final spot-kick from former Juventus midfielder Felipe Melo to seal a 3-2 shoot-out victory.

"It would have been better to play in the final, but you can see how our performance showed even the doubters how we can play," said El-Shenawy.

It was a bitter defeat for South American champions Palmeiras, who won the Copa Libertadores at the end of January by beating Santos 1-0 in the final.

"Defeating the CONMEBOL champions is a milestone," said Al Ahly's South African coach Pitso

Mosimane.

"We want to thank everybody... even the groundsman who cut the grass. It's a collective effort."

Egyptian side Al Ahly lost 2-0 to Bayern in Monday's semifinal, thanks to two Robert Lewandowski goals, while Palmeiras lost their semifinal 1-0 to Tigres.

Confed Cup: Wike pledges N20m for Rivers United to beat Enyimba

By David Ngobua

The Governor of Rivers State, Nyesom Wike has promised N20m reward for players and officials of Rivers United, if they will beat fellow Nigeria Professional Football League side, Enyimba FC in the first leg of the second Preliminary Round of the CAF Confederation Cup this Sunday in Aba.

The governor made the pledge yesterday at the Government House, Port Harcourt where he presented two brand new buses to Rivers United and Rivers Angels Football club.

While Rivers United got a state-of-the-art luxurious bus, fitted with numerous gadgets, Rivers Angels got a 30-seater coaster bus, in addition to the luxurious bus that has been approved for them.

Wike charged Rivers United to go ahead and win the CAF Confederation Cup, assuring the players that their lives would change after the victory.

He, also, tasked Rivers Angels to qualify for CAF Women Champions League and watch how their lives would change tremendously.

The governor went further to motivate both teams by promising them N10m for

Osimhen not at his best yet, says Gattuso

Napoli manager Gennaro Gattuso has revealed Victor Osimhen is far from his best after featuring against Atalanta in a Coppa Italia game on Wednesday night.

The Nigeria international was handed a starting role in the encounter but struggled to make much impact despite playing for 79 minutes as his side suffered a 3-1 loss in the game.

Osimhen only recently returned to the Parthenopeans team after suffering a shoulder injury while on international duty with Nigeria in November.

The forward then contracted coronavirus after visiting the West African country to celebrate his 22nd birthday and the yuletide season.

Subsequently, Osimhen did not play for the Stadio San Paolo outfit for more than 90 days and after watching the forward against Atalanta, Gattuso revealed the forward is still not at his best.

"It's not easy to be at the top of the game after being out for 94 days," Gattuso told the club website.

"He's still lacking that sharpness, which is his main asset, but he's gradually making progress. He's capable of much more."

Napoli paid a club-record fee of 80 million to French club Lille in order to secure the signature of the Nigeria international last summer.

The 22-year-old has only made 13 appearances across all competitions this season, scoring two goals and providing one assist.

Osimhen will hope to deliver convincing showings when Napoli take on Juventus in their next league game on Saturday.

Napoli are winless in their last three games which ensured they dropped to the sixth spot on the league table after gathering 37 points from 20 games.

Nigeria national team coach Gernot Rohr will hope Osimhen returns to his impressive form before their 2022 Africa Cup of Nations qualifiers in March.

Open grazing not sustainable BUT is ranching sustainable now?

The fastest way to create the greatest misery for the highest number of Nigerians is to try to break-up the country. For this reason, I always re-read the quote from one of the best historians we ever had that:

“There is no easy way to pull this country apart. The problems arising from such an exercise will be far bigger than the problem of trying to keep it going. The value of the size, the market, and the varieties of cultures etc. are important and should not be neglected.” Professor Ade Ajayi

We should always remember this. Nonetheless, there is always a risk that in spite of the potential advantages of staying together, the politics of brinkmanship that we play could one day throw us all into the abyss.

Following a number of eviction threats against pastoralists in the southern part of the country, the Northern Governors Forum (NGF) met this week to discuss the tension generated by the eviction orders. They correctly identified the current crisis as one that could do serious damage to the already fragile security situation in the country. If reprisal attacks occur, they would be followed by further re-reprisal attacks and the situation could get out of hand. According to the communiqué they released on Tuesday, they called for an urgent meeting of all the 36 state governors to meet under the platform of the Nigeria Governors Forum (NGF) and discuss the issue holistically with a view to resolving all areas of misunderstanding and conflicts arising from these threats and suspicion for the sake of national unity.

The communiqué called on political leaders to segregate between criminality and social groups in their domains with a view to treating criminals as criminals. The 19 northern governors announced that the current system of herding, conducted mainly through open grazing was no longer sustainable in view of growing urbanisation and population, adding that they will aggressively sensitise herdsmen on the need to adopt new methods of herding by ranching or other acceptable modern methods. The governors, therefore, appealed to the federal government to support states with grants to directly undertake pilot projects of modern livestock production that will serve as springboard and evidence for breaking resistance to the full implementation of new methods of livestock production. I agree with this statement. The reality, however, is that the transformation of livestock production was first announced by the Northern Regional Government in 1965, over 55 years ago but the steps to implement them have not yet been taken. It is easy to say let's stop open-grazing, it's another to provide the policy package, investment and support to make it a reality.

Pastoralism is the main livestock production system in much of Africa where pastoralists live in semi-arid zones. It is a historically developed strategy to cope with the uncertainties associated with climate change, build-up of parasites and other related challenges. It is above all an efficient way to produce livestock at relatively low prices through the use of non-commercial feeding stock. A pastoralist cow goes to market after four years of open-grazing and sells for 150,000 to 250,000 Naira. It produces between one and two litres of milk daily while other African cows produce 15 to 20 litres daily. It's simple economics, our hardy all-suffering cows cannot be fed with commercial feed because the return on investment will simply not exist. To stop open grazing is possible, BUT only if we develop an improved breed that has much higher levels of productivity than we have today.

The challenge for Northern governors is not the easy one of announcing the end of open grazing, it is what they will do to improve the breed and over what time span. It is actually dangerous to announce the end of open grazing without a plan on how to end it. It is also dangerous not to seek a way out of open grazing because Nigerians from all sections of the country are associating the growing insecurity in the country to the pastoralists community and are taking measures against them. In other words, the most urgent task before the country is to develop policy measures that would address the issues that have arisen.

As violence between herdsmen and farmers has grown and developed into criminality, rural banditry and mass kidnapping for ransom, popular narratives creating meaning, context and (mis) understandings have emerged. The narratives in the media and in popular discourse have become part of the drivers for expanding conflicts in the country. The protagonists have been associated into ethno-religious categories that fuel conflicts between two distinct groups depicted as perpetrators and victims, respectively. The result is negatively stereotyping between “the one” and “the other” that leads further to ethnic and religious bigotry, which fuels the hate process. We must get out of this hate trap.

The federal government, working with governors, needs to develop a new comprehensive policy framework that actually spells out the steps that could lead to the modernisation of livestock production in the country.

The framework must be designed to be mutually beneficial to pastoralists and farmers. Any policy that does not take into consideration the welfare of both sides will most likely fail or meet resistance by either side. It is clear that pastoralism is not sustainable in Nigeria over the long term due to the high population growth rate, expansion of farming and loss of pasture and cattle routes. At the same time, pastoralism cannot end or be prohibited in the short term as there are strong cultural and political-economic reasons for its existence. It is important, therefore, to develop a plan for a transitional period during which new systems would be put in place.

Experts should be assembled to map out the duration, strategy and timelines for the transition plan. As there is no miracle model for solving the problems, the plan should simultaneously pursue a number of models including:

Ranching works best in areas with lower population densities. Some people have in jest suggested Sambisa Game Reserve in the North East, why not – defeat Boko Haram and transform it into a major meat and milk producing zone.

Semi-intensive systems of animal husbandry should be pursued accompanied with requisite investment in infrastructure, training, extension, marketing and animal health service delivery in conjunction with the private sector.

The traditional form of pastoralism should continue for a period to be agreed upon with some improvements (in the form of coordinated mobility between wet and dry season grazing areas and effective management of farmers and pastoralists relations).

We need to evaluate our grazing reserves policy as most of them are located in forests, which have today become ungoverned territory housing both pastoralists and armed bandits. There has to be a new approach to open up the forests for easy access and surveillance while developing the infrastructure that would allow for intensive livestock breeding. In so doing, we need to also think about our ecology and the importance of maintaining our green cover and actually growing the green belt in the Sahel.

Commercial feeding of cattle requires developing sufficient capacity to produce high nutrient grasses in order to meet the feeding needs of the improved herds. Given the climate crisis, we need to develop alternative low water and drought-resistant grasses to be used to sustain the new industry of commercial feeding of the cattle.

Finally, let us not forget that there are two narratives about pastoral-farmer relations in Africa. In some countries such as Nigeria, it has been left to deteriorate almost to the point of no return. In other countries such as Chad, Ethiopia and Niger, the pre-existing institutionalised and functional mechanisms for pre-empting and resolving conflicts between farmers and pastoralists have been maintained thereby reducing serious conflict.

Nadal laughs off heckler; Kenin's title defence end in tears

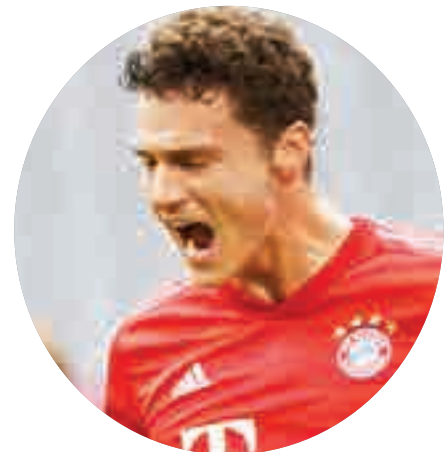

■ Rafael Nadal

Rafael Nadal laughed off a gesticulating heckler as he brushed aside Michael Mmoh and continued his quest for history at the Australian Open on Thursday.

On a day when defending women's champion Sofia Kenin departed in tears, but top-ranked Ashleigh Barty progressed, Nadal was impeccable on Rod Laver Arena.

Teenager Coco Gauff, 16, who beat Naomi Osaka to reach the fourth round last year, saw her challenge ended by Elina Svitolina. But Nadal, who has complained of a bad back as he seeks a record 21st Grand Slam title, swept past America's 177th-ranked Mmoh 6-1, 6-4, 6-2.

Bayern Munich win Club World Cup final

■ Benjamin Pavard

Bayern Munich beat Mexico's Tigres UANL 1-0 on Thursday thanks to Benjamin Pavard's winner on the hour, to win the Club World Cup title and earn their sixth trophy in less than nine months. Pavard scored in the 59th minute following a VAR review and in front of around 12 000 spectators allowed into Education City Stadium, after Tigres keeper Nahuel Guzman had stopped a Robert Lewandowski header.

The Germans, who also twice hit the woodwork, won all domestic and European titles they competed for in 2020 and are the first team to match Barcelona's sextuple from 2009.

It was also Bayern coach's Hansi Flick's sixth trophy since he took over in November 2019.
